Not illustrated. 1878 Excerpt: . . . who do put their hand to the plough very early to look back. If the Church had the wisdom of the serpent as well as the harmlessness of the dove, she would not bait her hook so badly. She would build splendid Sabbath schools, and splendid mission institutes, and lecture rooms. She would give childrens fetes and evangelistic tea parties. She would have the young ladies embroidering the childrens banners and giving lessons in sewing, drawing, and singing, and the young gentlemen organising deputations to all the workshops in the vicinity. She would have the old ladies filling out the tea, and the old gentlemen showing experiments in electricity, and giving lectures on penny banks and the Covenanters. In short, she would find work for every Christian of every sort of taste and inclination, and invent work on purpose, if she has it not ready to...
