

Does Europe need one language?

By Ilinca Apolzan

GRIN Verlag GmbH Nov 2009, 2009. Taschenbuch. Book Condition: Neu. 200x149x7 mm. Neuware - Scholarly Research Paper from the year 2008 in the subject Politics - International Politics - Topic: European Union, printed single-sided, grade: 2,3, Fontys University of Applied Sciences Venlo, course: European Studies, language: English, abstract: Today the European Union (EU) is home to 497 million people from diverse ethnic, cultural and linguistic backgrounds. The Union is the only organization that unifies so many different countries, more precisely 23 official languages and 27 European nations (Zimmer 2007, p. 20). Driven by the common idea of creating a democratic community and a globally competitive market, the EU strongly corroborates equality of every nation's culture, values and languages. Nevertheless the EU is currently struggling with the discrepancy between cultural and linguistic diversity and the equal integration of every member state. Additionally, the emerging English, as the international lingua franca, seems to put a strain on the peaceful cooperation of all 23 official languages. In view of this unfortunate development the question arises if Europe needs one common language. The first two segments of chapter 2 are to give an overview of the linguistic situation and the official language arrangements...
