Not illustrated. 1922 Excerpt: .to keep a very close record as to the location of the car from day to day so that it will not arrive at its fictitious destination before you file diversion orders. When diversion orders are filed after the car arrives at its destination, railroads make a charge for diverting. A record of location is accomplished in two ways: first, by keeping a car record before you and having a fairly close knowledge of the schedule of the train service over the route; second, by securing passing reports from your local railroad or from the traveling agents of the foreign lines. Some small shippers keep this record on the outside of an envelope containing the various records of the shipment, such as manifest, invoice, bill of lading, etc., while others have a form for the record printed upon a stiff card, convenient for filing, as shown in Figure 2. When to Use a Transit Card Where a car of produce is stored in transit, it is convenient to have another form covering the items involved in the transaction, which card is fastened to the car card, because, while the car is stored in transit, the shipment of this particular lot is not completed and all records pertaining thereto must be kept on file, ready for instant reference. A sample of such a card is shown as Figure 3. Straight Bills of Lading for Roller Shipments In making out a bill of lading for a roller, a...
