Excerpt from The Orchid: A Musical Play Chorus of Visitors: This high Horticultural College Is formed with the excellent plan Of giving young ladies the knowledge That makes them the equal of man. In gardens that have not been built on, The pupils may practise their powers (Like Eve in the poem of Milton) In learning the culture of flowers! Ladies: It s paradise! Extremely nice! What plants, and what bouquets, too! Gentlemen: It suits a mind that s quite refined, And then, you know, it pays, too! Ladies: What stacks and sheaves of flowers and leaves, What wealth of bud and blossom! Gentlemen: Just see the rare Cattleya there And that Odontoglossom! All: Oh, that Odontoglossom, Oh! Happy Horticulture! The Science, like a vulture, May seem to ravage beauty And scorn the artist s call; Yet beauty here and science Are found in close alliance United in the duty That s Horticultural! Oh! happy Horti - horti - horti - culture! (March.) (The Lady Warden and Pupils enter in order, Pupils marching.) Pupils: Here we come...
