Not illustrated. 1919 Excerpt: .hopelessly loose and irritating should he removed and substitutes supplied by artificial means, as the judgment of the operator will best advise. Fixed bridgework is being severely criticized at Tlxed Brldfltwork. the present time, although there is no doubt that this class of work is the most serviceable substitute we can supply in many cases. If carefully constructed along the lines we have all been taught, highly polished, and adapted in such manner that no irritation will result, the fixed bridge can be as easily cleaned as many of the natural teeth in proper alignment, and because of the fact that many people are too untidy, or perhaps better, too lazy to clean the fixed bridgework, and their own natural teeth, too, for that matter, or because the money-mad commercialist employs his abominable short-cut methods (and most of the criticized bridgework vyou d be found to be of such origin, if we were fair enough to investigate), is no reason why this class of work should be so censured. The problem of all living things is essentially a problem of nutrition. The problem of dentistry is the problem of correct nutrition for the human being, however this may best be obtained. The masticating equipment is necessary because ptyalin function is vitally essential, and the natural equipment is admittedly the best. This equipment we are striving to maintain through the educational oral hygiene movement, (the greatest unselfish movement ever attempted by a professional body) and through our...
