WHEN GOD ISN'T GREEN: A WORLD-WIDE JOURNEY TO PLACES WHERE RELIGIOUS PRACTICE AND ENVIRONMENTALISM COLLIDE (PAPERBACK)

Beacon Press, United States, 2016. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 226 x 150 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. In this lively, round-the-world trip, law professor and humorist Jay Wexler explores the intersection of religion and the environment. Whether it's Hindus in Mumbai carrying twenty-five-foot plaster idols of Ganesh into the sea, or Taoists in Hong Kong creating poisonous fumes by burning bushels of ghost money, or American Palm Sunday celebrants contributing to the deforestation of Central American palm forests, religious practices can sometimes cause significant damage to the environment. In this book, law professor Jay Wexler travels the globe from Alaska to India, from Singapore to Mexico and beyond to investigate instances where religious practice and environmentalism collide in order to understand the complexity of these problems and learn how society can best address them. Whether he's feasting on whale blubber above the Arctic Circle, bumping along in the back of a battered jeep through a Guatemalan jungle, or learning how to pluck a dead bald eagle at the National Eagle Repository, Wexler never fails to entertain as he tries to answer the question Can religious practice and environmental protection coexist?.
