Not illustrated. 1900 Excerpt: .than a year very satisfactorily, and we do not regret having selected them as conveyors. The engines on these cableways are At. Loading the Skips Dimensions of Canal Blasting Number of Men Required The Chicago Canal in the rock section has a uniform width of 162 feet at the top of cut, 160 feet on the bottom, and averaged from 33 to 36 feet in depth. The excavation was made in three lifts, as 12 feet was the maximum depth for the practical working of the channeling machines. On each of the lower lifts the channeler was offset 6 inches to give working room. Each lift was channeled on the side in a vertical cut, then drilled by a series of holes across the canal a few feet back from the face of the breast, and, when the face was well cleaned of broken rock, all the holes were fired together, and a mass of rock extending the entire width of the canal and 12 feet in depth blasted out ready to load into the skips, which were taken out on the bank previous to the blast and directly afterward returned and rapidly filled and removed by the cableway. In most plants 9 skips are employed with 4 men to each skip, or a total of 36 men. There were also 3 men constantly employed in hooking on the skips. The larger rocks were chained to the hook of the fall block, and taken out in...
